Tree of Life

AIM

To understand the importance of the Sun Dance to Plains Indians. Picking out important events in life that help you grow.

Those who take part in the dancing do not take food or water. They face the sun and the sacred cottonwood tree. Sometimes as an act of bravery a dancer may pierce the skin of the chest and insert small ropes. The other end of the rope is tied to the tree. The dancers may blow on a special whistle while dancing. "Oh Wakan Tanka (Creator, Great Mystery, Great Spirit) be merciful to me so my people may live." As a dancer speaks he pulls on the ropes until they break through the skin, freeing the dancer.

The Sun Dance Whistle was taken by the older boy in A True Story of a Ghost.

- Why do you think the whistle was so important to the dead man?
- What is your most treasured object? Why?
- Write or Firetalk about what made that object seem so special to you.

SUN DANCE CEREMONY

The Sun Dance of the plains Indians is held each summer. It is a special time to pray. Each person prays for the renewed strength of all the people. This ceremony lasts for several days and many people take part. Very careful preparations are made since the Sun Dance is sacred - special.
The cottonwood tree represents the tree of life. Sometimes in order to see if we are working towards our interests or life goals it is good to look at the path we are following. Usually certain events or turning points can mark the growth you are making. Things like becoming a new brother or sister add some responsibilities to your life. Maybe you received your Indian name, received an award, joined Little League or was asked to do something within your religion. All of these things represent a measure of your growth.
